

Sea Mist for Piano Solo

LESSON FOUR

Introduction to "A Star to Steer Her by"

"A Star to Steer Her by" is the second line from the first paragraph of the poem "Sea Fever". This song depicts the evening stars that light up the sailor's sky. The music starts out slowly, portraying the first few stars that appear in the heavens. It then speeds up as if more and more stars begin lighting up the sky. Sailors have often relied on the stars and their light to guide them. "A Star to Steer Her by", in my opinion, refers to one star specifically - The North Star, which points the sailors to true north, helping them find their way home.

Play the E flat major scale below. Try playing each scale 1, 2, 3, and 4 octaves up and down the piano.

Play the examples below. This first example shows measures 13 - 17 from "A Star to Steer Her by".

Play this example from the song. This example shows measures 18 - 19. The left hand is moving up diatonically (according to the scale). The right hand plays one of the triads (built from the major scale) but the triad is inverted (not played in root position with the note after which the chord is named on the bottom). After the triad is played the right hand moves up diatonically until the next triad is played and the pattern is repeated (for fun, see if you can determine which triad is being played and in which inversion).

Play this example from the song. This example shows measures 59 - 61. The left hand is playing an E flat octave interval moving up in octaves. The right hand plays octave chords in root, first, or second inversions (as before, see if you can figure out the octave chords).
